A method of summarizing a sequence of words in a text processing machine includes the steps of feeding an input sequence to an encoder, feeding an output sequence to the decoder, and generating a new output sequence from the output sequence.